Queer Peatures About Them That Are Little Known.

Oysters live 10 or 12 years when they have the chance. In this country they don't get the chance.

Many horses are fond of beer, and to a tired horse a bottle of beer in his gruel-is a great restorative. It acts as a "pick me up," and often makes a horse with no ap-petite eat freely. Brewers understand this, and that is one reason why their horses always seem to be in good condition. The large horned beetle can carry 315 times its own weight. One has been known to walk away with a two and a quarter pound weight.

Live bees are sometimes shipped on ica so as to keep them dormant during the journey. This is particularly the case with bumblebees, which have been taken to New Zealand, where they are useful in fertilizing the red clover that has been introduced into the colony.

The amount of light that can be obtained from fireflies is not generally known. These insects have two bright spots on their thorax, and also brilliant wings on the abdomen, and give light sufficient to enable one to read at a little distance. Two or three placed in the cen ter of a room will shed a soft light all over it. They are very common in Cuba, Bra-zil, Guiana, Venezuela and Mexico. In those countries at night the natives affix the little creatures to their shoes and thus obtain light to see the road and frighten away the snakes. Mexican women use away the snakes. Mexican women use them as jowels. They tie them in little gauze bags and put them in their hair or on their clothing. They keep them in wire cages and feed them on scraps of sugar

Reynard is a knowing animal. The foxes are much tormented by fleas, but when the infliction becomes too severe they know how to get rid of the insects. they know how to get rid of the insects. They gather from the bark of trees moss, which they carry to a stream that deepens by degrees. Here they enter the water, still carrying the moss in their mouths, and, going backward, beginning from the end of their tails, they advance by slow degrees till the whole body, with the exception of the mouth, is entirely impossed. The fleas during this preceding mersed. The fleas, during this proceeding, have rushed in rapid haste to the dry parts, and finally to the moss, and the fox, when he has, according to his calculation, allowed sufficient time for all the fleas to take their departure, quietly open his mouth. The moss floats off down the stream with its burden of floas, and when it is out of jumping reach the fox finds its way to the bank much relieved.—New York Heraid

Not a Soldier.

A certain solicitor general of England visited Berlin on a xacation, and being mistaken for bearing a military title was invited to a review and mount ed on a charger. Being accustomed to following the hounds, he made an ex cellent equestrian, but when asked opinions as to some of the maneuvers was obliged to parry the cross examination. A similar incident befell the late Marshall Bidwell, an eminent New York lawyer, in the fifties, who visited Paris in long vacation. Presenting his card at the gate of the Tuileries, he was politoly informed that the emperor was at a review, and if he desired a dragoon should be detailed to accompany him on horseback to the Champs de Mars. "But I am not a soldier," said the old lawyer. "Not a soldier, and a mar-shal?" [Examining the card.] "What a droll country is America!"—Green TAUGHT BY INSTINCT.

Calling People to Church.

When I was examining the church bells the East Riding of Yorkshire, about 1870, I came to a little place called Fordon, on the wolds between Malton and Bridlington. It was a very primitive place quite out off from the world, the few in habitants hardly knowing the road over the hilltop to the next pace northward. The diminutive building which serves as a church is built near the brow of the hill. It has no tower, bell turret or bell cot. Op inquiry I found that it had no bell. The parson came over on horseback nov and then from a neighboring parish, tied up his horse outside the church, opened the door, put on his surplice and then walked to the top of the hill and cracked his whip several times, "and then we knaws as it's time ti gang ti chotch," said my informant on the spot.—Notes and young man writes to Edward W. Bok inquiring why so many girls seem to prefer the company of young fellows of slightly blotted character—men who have seen the world-and in many cases marry them, in face of the fact that their past lives are known to them. In The Ladies' Home Journal Mr. Bok, its editor, makes this reply: "Girls-that is, the right kind of girls-do not prefer the company of young men of this sort. Doubtless, you have come across instances where this rule has been otherwise; so have I. But it is all in the seeming, and not in the reality. Depend upon one thing—girls have as high an estimate of purity in man as men have of purity in woman.

GIRLS VALUE PURITY IN MEN.

There are, of course, cases to the contrary, but these are few. Where girls marry men who are known to have led what is called a 'worldly life,' it is more generally due to a misunderstand ing of facts or to ignorance than people imagine. There is a type of girl who finds a peculiar satisfaction in the con-quest of a man who has 'seen the world' and then comes to her as the one woman of all her sex who can make him happy. This sometimes pleases her vanity and love of conquest, but she is not many years older before she discovers that the has satisfied those feelings at a very high cost.

There is another type of girl who rather fancies a man who is what is called 'fast.' But that sort of girl is painfully ignorant of what is meant by that word as applied to a man. If she were not, she would be very apt to change the adjective to 'vulgar.' And as she matures she finds this out. It is only young men of upright lives who can hope to win the favor and love of girls of high motives, the girls who make the best wives. If, at times, girls seem to favor young men of another kind, the glamonr is simply transitory. It is rare, very rare, that a girl's better instincts do not lead her to the higher grade of young men. An upright life never fails of reward, and of the highest reward, from the hand of woman.'

HOW INDIANS MEASURE TIME.

They Fix Their Dates by Sleeps and Moor and Winters.

Our Indians measure time solely by days, by sleeps, by moons and by win-ters. The Indian has no name for any subdivision of time less than a day. When he desires to indicate a shorter period, he points to the heavens, and measuring off a space says, "It was as long as it would take the sun to go from there to there." A day is from daylight to darkness, "sleep," or night, from dark to daylight. He has no name for any day, nor has he any subdivision of time corresponding to our week. moon commences with the first streak of the crescent in the west and lasts until the next one appears, but the days of the moon are neither numbered nor named. "From winter to winter" is the nearest approach he has to our ten The year commences with the first fall of snow. An Indian will tell you he is so many winters old, but having no months or days he never has a birthday. The Indians who formerly inhabited the southern part of Texas, where there is no snowfall, are said to have fixed the commencement of the year at the first 'norther," a furious and chilling wind that sweeps from the north and is of frequent occurrence during the winter months.

No year has any name or number fix ing a sequence or point of reference, but each band will designate a year by its most prominent occurrence, as a fight with hostiles, death of a chief, prevalence of disease, abundance or scarcity of food, or failing anything marvelous or striking by the name of the stream on which was located the winter camp. But these are mere remembrances, and excellent as is the Indians memory they, after a few years, fade into a jumble of disconnected facts without sequence or usefulness. - Cincinnati En-

Meaning of the Word "Omaha

The name "Omaha" bears testimony to the long journey of the people, and reveals some of the causes which brought about this breaking up into distinct tribes. It is composed of two words, which signify "going against the current," or up the stream. The Omahas were the people who went up the stream, while the Quapaws, their near of kin, went, as their name reveals, "with the current," or down the stream. The traditions of both these peoples say that the parting occurred during a hunt ing expedition, each division finally set tling in the lands whither they had wandered apart. This epochal hunt must have been centuries ago, for the Quapaws bore their descriptive name in 1540, being mentioned in the Portu-guese narrative of De Soto's expedition as then living on the Arkansas river, where they dwelt until 1839, when they ceded their long occupied lands to the United States.—Alice C. Fletcher in Century.

The Laws of Nature.

The laws of nature are just, but terri ble. There is no weak mercy in them Cause and consequence are inseparable and inevitable. The elements have no forbearance. The fire burns, the water drowns, the air consumes, the earth buries. And perhaps it would be well for our race if the punishment of crimes against the laws of man were as inevitable as the punishment of crimes against the laws of nature-were man as unerring in his judgments as nature.-Long

MAGIC OF THE WOODS.

What Hunters Say About the Spell of an Otter's Eyes.

By the Adirondack woodsmen along the banks of the West Canada creek the otter is regarded as quite as sly as the fox, inasmuch as it is very difficult to trap in any kind of contrivance. There are fewer stories about the creature's intelligence, as the animals are scarce and have not been so much observed as have the foxes.

There has been, and probably is, an otter that for six years anyhow, and perhaps longer, has traveled down the creek winter and summer about every two weeks. In the winter it left a running. sliding trail in the snow on the ice, sel dom leaving the creek bed to go into a cove or overland for a dozen or 15 rods In summer weather it fished and caught frogs in the coves of the flats. many shots have been fired at it and a lot of traps set for it, but none was ever successful. It is believed by woodsmen that the otters, like the hell divers, loons, mink and others, dodge shot or I saw this otter once some years ago in the summer time, and while only one feature of the animal is distinct in my mind, I do not recollect any other wild animal so well. The body is a mere glimmer of black in waving swale grass. Even the head is a burly, rusty gray shadow, a sort of background for the two eyes.

I have seen deers when they were standing still looking at me, have looked at squirrels, rabbits, partridges, foxes and other wild animals alarmed by my presence, but their forms, rather than their eyes, are more or less distinct. In fact, the eyes seem secondary in the mind pictures, except in the case of the otter. It seems to me that the otter did not merely look at me; it was more as if it looked into me, the same as the sensation one has when some one-a man or woman-"reads your innermost thoughts." These eyes were large and full rounded, dark brown with a shimmer of light gray skating across and around the center, and with a lively beauty as different from the dead beauty of a deer's full eye. It sent precisely such chills up and down my back, as dark human eyes have done. It was a tense, particular look, and not the general gaze of a bird or other animal. The otter, I think, hypnotized me, for I did not shoot, although my impression is that we looked at one another for a minute or two. - Forest and Stream.
